

About the authors

ANDREAS ATHANASIADES received his BA in English Language and Literature from the University of Cyprus, graduating with excellence in 2003. A year later he completed his MA at the University of Leeds, graduating with Merit. He is currently teaching at the University of Cyprus, having completed his PhD in English Literature and Comparative Cultural Studies at the same University in 2013 on a full scholarship from the Government of Cyprus, with his PhD dissertation exploring socio-political connotations of desire and sexuality in the works of Hanif Kureishi. He has published articles and book chapters on Islamic fundamentalism, desire, and identity in the Journal of Postcolonial Studies, Ideology in Postcolonial Texts and Contexts, the Journal of Mediterranean Studies, and Indi@Logs among others. His academic interests include postcolonialism, sexuality, memory, identity, life writing, queer studies, trauma theory and cinematic studies. Contact: athanasiades.andreas@ucy.ac.cy

SAMUEL BIDAUD is an Associate Professor of French philology at Palacký University Olomouc, Czech Republic, and an external lecturer at the University of Mayotte, France. His research focuses on Romance and Czech languages and literatures. He is particularly interested in the works of José Mauro de Vasconcelos, Hergé and the Czech writer Jan Čep. He contributes to the journals Critique and Quinzaines : lettres, arts et idées. He has also published more personal essays and short stories in L'Atelier du roman, Harfang, Poésie/première, Les écrits and Noria. Contact: bidaudsamuel@gmail.com

SIMON BRODBECK was born in the north-west of England and educated at the universities of Cambridge and London. He is Professor of Religious Studies at Cardiff University in Wales, where he has worked since 2008. His research focuses on early Sanskrit literature, particularly the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa, using a variety of methods and approaches. He is the author of two monographs, The Mahābhārata Patriline: Gender, Culture, and the Royal Hereditary (2009) and Divine Descent and the Four World-Ages in the Mahābhārata – or, Why Does the Kṛṣṇa Avatāra Inaugurate the Worst Yuga? (2022), and the translator of Krishna's Lineage: the Harivamsha of Vyāsa's Mahābhārata (2019). Contact: BrodbeckSP@cardiff.ac.uk

MERILIN JÜRJO holds master's degrees in psychology and theater studies and is currently pursuing a PhD in theater studies at the University of Tartu. Her research focuses on the intersection of psychology and culture, specifically examining if and how theater changes attitudes, and why. By integrating reception theories with psychological processes, she aims to deepen the understanding of culture's role in human life. In addition to the academic work, Jürjo is a practicing psychologist, addressing mental health challenges such as depression and trauma. Her role involves practicing psychotherapy and teaching individuals coping techniques and skills to help them lead normal, fulfilling lives. Beyond academia and psychology, Jürjo has authored two fiction books and written a play that delves into the psychology of family relationships and their primary challenges. Jürjo hopes to continue merging theater studies and psychology in her creative work, offering people opportunities to learn about psychology and gain new perspectives. Contact: merilin.jurjo@ut.ee

EGLĖ KETURAKIENĖ is an Associate Professor at the University of Vilnius, Lithuania. She is the author of the dissertation Tradition and Its Modification of Historical Consciousness in the Lithuanian Poetry of the 19th Century (2006) and has published over 20 articles (for example, "Lithuanian Literature and Shakespeare: Several Cases of Reception", Interlitteraria 2019, 24). Her scientific interests include comparative literature studies, literary theory, modernism in Lithuanian literature (especially in poetry and in the short story) and culture. Contact: egle.keturakiene@knf.vu.lt

MARISA KËRBIZI is an Associate Professor and Head of the Department of Literature at Alexander Moisiu University, Durrës, Albania. She is also a member of the Research Scientific Committee at AMU. She holds the position of vice CEO at the Association of Heritage and Education, an organization dedicated to advancing understanding of cultural heritage. Her main fields of research include issues relating to contemporary literature, especially prison literature, the unofficial publications of condemned writers (during the communist period), etc. She is the organizer of the annual expedition to Spaçi prison (the most notorious prison during the communist period in Albania), which aims to raise awareness of the importance of remembrance of the past in order to preserve the future. Contact: marisakerbizi@yahoo.com

LEENA KÄOSAAR is an Associate Professor of Cultural Theory at the Institute of Cultural Research, University of Tartu, Estonia. Her research focuses on life writing, memory studies, and trauma, especially in the context of Stalinist repressions, the Estonian Western diaspora, and women's life narratives. She has widely published on these subjects, with particular attention to the representation of traumatic experience, relationality, dynamics of address, travelling memory, and gender. Her work also engages with creative nonfiction and life story writing, which she teaches at the University of Tartu. She is co-editor of several volumes and special issues, including Aino Kallas: Negotiations with Modernity (SKS, 2010, with Lea Rojola), Border Crossings: Essays in Identity and Belonging (Routledge, 2020, with Paul Longley Arthur), Narrating Migration and Diaspora (special issue of Trames, 2019, with Triinu Ojamaa and Aija Sakova), and two special issues of Folklore on Migration and Diasporas (2020) and Trauma (2021, with Sergey Troitskiy and Liisi Laineste). As part of her engagement with applied memory studies and narrative practice, Kõosaar also works on the collection and documentation of life stories of Ukrainian refugees in Estonia within the framework of the project “Taking Shelter in Estonia: the Stories of Ukrainians Fleeing from the War.” The project seeks to support Ukrainian cultural memory in the context of war, forced displacement, and collective trauma. Contact: leena.kaosaar@ut.ee

EDLIRA MACAJ is an Associate Professor and the Vice Dean of the Faculty of History and Philology and lecturer at the Department of Literature, University of Tirana, Albania. She is interested in literary theory, criticism, translation, and anthropology. Since 2015, Macaj has participated in international conferences and published monographies, university textbooks, and numerous scientific articles. She has also offered professional expertise in national education and literature-related cultural projects. Contact: edliralib@yahoo.com

IVETA MONTVYDIENĖ graduated from Lithuanian Philology, Vilnius University in 2006. She holds a master’s degree in Lithuanian Literature from Vilnius University Kaunas Faculty. Her scientific interest is modernism in Lithuanian prose. Contact: ivamontve@gmail.com

AKVILĖ NAUDŽIŪNIENĖ is an Assistant Professor and researcher at the Faculty of History, Vilnius University, Lithuania. She specializes in history education of ethnic minorities in Eastern Europe as well as in the representation of history and memory of Jewish community in Lithuania during the 20th–21st centuries. Currently she is finishing her postdoctoral fellowship project on the Jewish history representation in Lithuanian fiction at Lithuanian Historical Institute. Contact: akvile.naudziuniene@gmail.com

MARKO PAJEVIĆ, after being in post at the Sorbonne, Paris IV, at Queen’s University Belfast as well as Royal Holloway and Queen Mary, Universities of London, took up a European funded Professorship of German Studies at the University of Tartu in January 2018. He then taught German literature at Uppsala University and since autumn 2025 at the Sorbonne Nouvelle in Paris. He was also Senior Research Fellow at the Centre Marc Bloch (Humboldt University Berlin) in 2017 and at the School of Advanced Study of the University of London (2023). He has published widely on poetics, with four monographs (on Celan 2000, on Kafka 2009, on poetic thinking 2012 and 2022, the last book also translated into English (Routledge 2023) and Estonian (Tartu UP 2023)), thirteen (co-)edited volumes/special issues and over eighty peer-reviewed articles/chapters. He has developed a poetological anthropology and the notion of 'poetic thinking' – see the website apt.ut.ee. In recent years, he has focused on the political dimension of cultural representations, around the concepts of multilingualism (edited volume 2020 and special issue of Interlitteria 2021/1), of biopolitics (edited volume de Gruyter 2023 and special issue Journal of European Studies 2024/1), and of climate engineering (special issue of Monatshefte 2023/3), as well as on the notion of the abyss (two edited volumes Brill 2024 and 2025). Contact: marko.pajevic2025@gmail.com

JUAN PABLO PATIÑO KARAM holds a PhD in Romance Language and Literature Studies from the University of Barcelona (Cum Laude). His research focuses on the criticism of 20th-century Latin American literature and 20th-century French literature from a comparative perspective, both with other narrative expressions and with other arts (such as painting and music). He is a member of the National System of Researchers of Mexico. Some recent publications include La multiplicación laberíntica en El miedo de perder a Eurídice, Literatura Mexicana, 36 (1) (2025), 163–188; 'Los Juegos del Tiempo en los Cuentos de Elena Garro', Jordan Journal of Modern Languages and Literatures 15 (3), (2023), 1121–1142; 'Equivalencias musicales en la obra de Felisberto Hernández', Revista chilena de literatura, 106 (2022): 561–585; 'La palabra líquida en la obra de Felisberto Hernández', Bulletin of Spanish Studies 96 (6) (2019), 1015–1036. He is also the translator to Spanish of Triunfo del tiempo. Seguido de Pequeño Cupido by Pascal Quignard, Canta Mares (2023).

Contact: juanpablopk@mail.com

FLÓRA VÁRKONYI is a PhD candidate in Literary Studies, Finnish Literature at Tampere University. She completed her BA in Hungarian Language and Literature and her MA in Finnish Studies at Eötvös Loránd University in Budapest, Hungary. In her doctoral dissertation, Várkonyi examines the first two novels by Pajtim Statovci, My Cat Yugoslavia and Crossing. She specialises in migration novels and other migration literature in contemporary Finland. The main topics of her work are racism studies, ethnic stereotyping, cultural identity, queer theory, gender studies, character studies and trauma fiction. In addition, her interests are in poetry, literary history, comparative literature and translation. Contact: onerva.flora.varkonyi@gmail.com