

About the Authors

YVONNE FÖRSTER is appointed Foreign Expert and Research Professor at Shanxi University Taiyuan, China and teaches Philosophy at Leuphana University Lüneburg, Germany. She has been awarded Senior Research Fellowships at two Institutes for Advanced Studies (Media Cultures of Computer Simulation at Leuphana and Cultural Sciences at University of Konstanz) and was a visiting Professor at Bauhaus University Weimar and University of Kassel, Germany. Currently she is senior research fellow at GCAS College Dublin. Her research focuses on human–machine relations, critical posthumanism, theories of embodiment and fashion as art. Recent publications include “Aesthetics of the Past and the Future, Human Life within Changing Environments” (in Aesthetics in Dialogue, ed. by Z. Somhegyi and M. Ryyänen, Peter Lang 2020) and “Technologies of Religion: From Prayer Bots to a Looming Singularity” (in Philosophy of Religion around the World: Critical Perspectives and Approaches, ed. by N. Loewen and A. Rostalska, forthcoming, Bloomsbury 2023).

SISSEL FURUSETH is a professor of Nordic literature at the University of Oslo and holds a Dr. Art. in Scandinavian Studies from the Norwegian University of Science and Technology in Trondheim. Affiliated with the Oslo School of Environmental Humanities she is currently coordinating the Critical Petroaesthetics interdisciplinary research group. She has published extensively on ecocriticism, literary critical reception, versification and poetic modernism. Her English publications include articles such as “The Poem as a Site of Inherited Structures and Artistic Innovation” (2009), “The Literary Magazine and the Making of a Writer” (2016), “The Cultural Memory of Circumpolar Survival” (2020), and “Nordic Contemporary Fiction Grieving the Loss of Snow” (2021).

VANESSA L. HADDAD is chair of General Studies at the State University of New York (SUNY) Erie and holds an appointment at the University at Buffalo where she teaches pre-service social studies teachers in technology-enhanced pedagogies. Her research focuses on games in culture and education, and how they can be used to improve everyday life. She currently resides in Buffalo, New York.

JENNI G. HALPIN is an associate professor of English at Savannah State University. Her publications include Contemporary Physics Plays, “Godly Mass Extinction: Robert J. Sawyer’s Calculating God and Extinction’s Teleologies”, “Representing Science that Isn’t: Harvest as Science Fiction Theatre”, and, with Jonathan Elmore, An Introduction to African and Afro-Diasporic Peoples and Influences in British Literature and Culture before the Industrial Revolution. She currently chairs the British Society for Literature and Science.

PEGGY KARPOUZOU is Assistant Professor in Theory of Literature at the Faculty of Philology of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. She received her BA degree in Linguistics from the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. She holds DEA and a PhD in Theory of Literature from Université Sorbonne Nouvelle-Paris III. She has taught courses on Literary Theory, European Literature and Modern Greek Literature in several universities. She is the author and editor of several works, including La Poétique de l’ironie dans la nouvelle du XIXe siècle (2003) and A. Tzouma, P. Karavia and P. Karpouzou, Hellenic and Translated in Greek Bibliography of Literary Theory (1940–2007) (2019). She has also participated in many international conferences and research programs of the National Center for Scientific Research (CNRS-France), Gallica (BNF National Library of France), and the University of Athens. Her research interests focus on Literary Theories and Cultural Criticism (Poststructuralism, Identity Politics, Posthumanism, Ecocriticism, Spatial Studies, Interrelations of Literature and Science, Science Fiction, Travel writing) in Greek, French, and Anglophone Literature of the 19th–21st centuries. She is member of international editorial boards, scientific associations and networks in her research fields and is Editor in Chief at the Journal of Ecohumanism, co-editor of the Posthumanities and Citizenship Futures book series at Rowman & Littlefield, and co-editor of Environmental Humanities at TPLondon, based in the UK.

ROBERTO MARCHESINI is Director of the School of Human-Animal Interactions and the Centre for the Study of Posthumanist Philosophy, both based in Bologna, Italy. He studied veterinary science and philosophy at the University of Bologna. Marchesini has been directed his studies into philosophical ethology, bioethics, zooanthropology, and posthumanism in an effort to better comprehend human–animal interactions and technology. He links science and the humanities, practice and theory in researching real-world relations between humans and animals as well as philosophical studies of the far-ranging influence of animals on human identity, culture, and being. He has written or co-written more than 50 books and many scientific essays. Amongst his main English-language publications are: Over the human: Posthumanism and the Concept of Animal Epiphany (Springer 2017), The Philosophical Ethology of Roberto Marchesini (Collected essays edited by Jeffrey Bussolini, Brett Buchanan, Matthew Chrulew, Rutledge 2017), Dialogo Ergo Sum: My Pathway into Posthumanities (University of Virginia Press, 2018), Beyond Anthropocentrism (Mimesis International, 2018), Philosophical Ethology and Animal Subjectivity, in Animality in Contemporary Italian Philosophy edited by Felice Cimatti and Carlo Salzani (Palgrave Macmillan, 2020), The Virus Paradigm (Cambridge University Press 2021), with Marco Celentano Critical Ethology and Post-Anthropocentric Ethics (Springer, 2021).

MARKO MITIĆ is a Teaching Assistant of American Studies and American Literature at the English Department of the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Niš, Serbia. He received his BA and MA degrees from the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Niš, Serbia. He is currently a PhD candidate in American Literature at the same faculty. His areas of academic interest include: American literature – the classics, contemporary American literature and American short story.

SWARNALATHA RANGARAJAN is Professor of English at the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, IIT Madras and is passionate about environmental humanities. She is the founding editor of the Indian Journal of Ecocriticism (IJE). Her academic publications include Ecocriticism: Big Ideas and Practical Strategies (2018) and co-edited works titled Ecoambiguity, Community, and Development (2014) and Ecocriticism of the Global South (2015). She is the co-translator of Mayilamma: The Life of a Tribal Eco-Warrior (2018). She is one of the series editors for Routledge Studies in World Literatures and Environment and co-editor of the Routledge Book of Ecocriticism and Environmental Communication (2019). She is the co-editor of the forthcoming A Handbook of Medical-Environmental Humanities to be published by Bloomsbury Academic in 2022. Her short fiction has appeared in anthologies of publishing houses such as Penguin, Zubaan, Westland, New Asian Writing, South Asian Review, to name a few. Her poetry has appeared in the collection All the Worlds Between (Yoda Press, 2017) and in Muse India. Her debut novel, Final Instructions, was published by Authorspress in 2015. She has co-edited a collection of interviews with contemporary women writers from Tamil Nadu titled Lifescapes, published by leading feminist press Women Unlimited in 2019.

SANCHAR SARKAR is a research scholar (PhD) at the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences in Indian Institute of Technology Madras. He is currently pursuing his PhD in environmental humanities under the supervision of Dr. Swarnalatha Rangarajan. He is engaged with writing research papers on specific topics that trace the contemporary trajectories of ecocriticism in post-apocalyptic environment and literature. His interest lies in the field of eco-speculative fiction and he is also passionate about visual narratives that represent and engage with the insights of environmental consciousness.

ANA KOCIĆ STANKOVIĆ, PhD, is an Assistant Professor of American and African American Studies and American Literature at the English Department of the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Niš, Serbia. She received her MA degree from the School of Education, University of Nottingham, UK and a PhD in Anglo-American literature and culture from the University of Niš, Serbia. She is the author of a textbook The African American Experience: An Introduction (2021) and a member of The European Association for American Studies (EAAS) and The European Society for the Study of English (ESSE). Her areas of academic interest include: African American literature and history, American literature – the classics and drama, American women and other minority writers and American colonial history.

NIKOLETA ZAMPAKI is PhD Candidate in Modern Greek Literature at the Faculty of Philology of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens in Greece. She was Instructor at the Utah University in the U.S.A., International Student and Fellow at MIT in the U.S.A., Harvard Extension School, Stanford University, Oxford University, Universität Tübingen in Germany, Eötvös Loránd University in Hungary, etc. Her disciplines are Environmental Humanities, Posthumanities, Digital Humanities, Literary Theory, Comparative Literature, and the Phenomenology of Maurice Merleau-Ponty. She is editor and reviewer at many journals overseas, Associate and Managing Editor at the Journal of Ecohumanism, and current member of the Education Team of Glenn Research Center at NASA, ASLE U.S.A, Posthumanism Research Institute at Brock University in Canada, Environmental Humanities Network at Warwick, etc. She has also participated in many conferences and is a multilingual student working in English, French, Romanian, Russian, Chinese, Hungarian, Maori, and Turkish. She is also co-editor with Professor Peggy Karpouzou of the Posthumanities and Citizenship Futures book series at Rowman & Littlefield, and Environmental Humanities at TPLondon, based in the UK.